Prof. J. C. Monaghan Lectures on Dissipation of Natural Resources—Educational System Also Wasteful.

"Are We a Wise or a Wasteful Nation?" was discussed Wednesday night, at the High School, by Prof. J. C. Monaghan of New York City. That we are not wise and that we are extravagant as a nation would be the conclusion reached through Prof. Monaghan's

The speaker touched on the former supremacy of Italian commerce, in the centuries up to the sixteenth, and advar ced as the reason for its decline in this leadership the lack of native coal and iron. "And," said the lecturer, "there is an interesting sequel to this since electricity has come into use, for Italy is again coming into her own through the electricity that is developed from the waters of the Alps and the Apennines." Prof. Monaghan, as many of his hearers already knew, through a previous lecture is an admirer of Italy's achievements. Last evening he quoted Macauley who says that: "With the possible exception of our own country, no country in all Europe, in the nineteenth century, can compare with Italy in the fourteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth centuries." The Speaker, in speaking inciden-ally of Italy's past greatness, said that some writers put the thirteenth century ahead of all the centuries of human experiences. He, himself stated: "The age of the renaissance in Italy is the greatest period in history next to the age of Pericles in Greece." Getting back to the main theme the lecturer spoke of England's succeeding Italy in commercial superiority. "Of the fifteen thousand square miles of iron in Europe," asserted the speaker, "England had from ten to twelve thou-sand miles, and had maintained her commercial advantage up to ten or twenty years ago, but we have finally succeeded in competing with England in the industrial and commercial world because of the marvelous deposits of coal and iron in this country. However, climate has always played its part in industrial activity, say what we will. In the summer at Rome one feels like taking the siesta after dinner and enjoying the dolce far niente of the Spaniards. Mr. Dooley, with his wit and philosophy, says: When in Rome they said I must do as the Romans do: Begorra I find they do nothing at all, and that is very suitable to me."

In speaking of the official investigations made in England, Prof. Monaghan said that one of these researches declared that in two hundred, or two hundred and fifty years, their coal would become exhausted. Iron, however. England has in Scandinavia, having acquired large beds there, and also in Spain. A second investigation under the scientist, Wallace, who discoveerd coal deposits practicable for mining in the islands off the coast, added another hundred years to the period before exhaustion. Of the computations made in the United States the speaker sald we had, as Mr. Cargenie puts it, two thousand billion tons of coal, enough to last us at the rate of four hundred million tons a year for thousand years, while the best coal in Europe was to be exhausted in two hundred and fifty years; but we are doubling every decade, that is doubling our output and doubling our waste; so that, in a hundred and fifty, or two hundred years at most, our coal mines will be exhausted; and our success in industrial and commercial lines has been due to these wonderful deposits. They have put us at the head of the industrial world. Indeed, this country manufactures almost as much as all Europe combined; we are very close in our foreign trade to England herself. The business done within these United States is larger than the commerce of the whole world and is based upon these marvelous deposits of coal and iron. We are producing onehalf of the iron, coal and steel of the

In regard to the wasteful manner of production the speaker of the evening said: "Whereas we have taken out, up to the present time, about sixteen billion tons of coal, nine billion tons have been wasted, and only a little over eight billion tons have been utilized; so, if we go on that way increasing our output and increasing our waste it is only a very simple problem for a boy in the grammar grades to figure out that in one hundred or one hundred and fifty years our coal mines will be exhausted. The method of mining, whereby more than half is wasted was shown by the speaker. In our country he said that coal is found in three layers, the middle layer of much greater width than the layers on either side. This middle section is mined and those on either sides were left. and in time crumble and fall mixing slate and other foreign materials in the coal, thus making it impossible ever to mine it. Of the billion tons of coal that we have used we get only six, seven or eight per cent. of its possible potential use; while in producing electricity we use one-fifth of one per cent. of the potentiality of coal.

world. We have passed the forty per cent, mark in our steel output."

In treating of our resources under the head of iron Prof. Monaghan spoke of the noted Swedish writer who made a computation that there were about n billion tons of iron ore in the a horse to suit any man. world; he put us down for from one to Wagons, Harness, Blankets, Whips, one and a half billion tons. "Mr. Carnegle" said the speaker, "gives the Inited State alone more than a billion tons of iron ore, and of the most valuable in the world. The waste in producing iron is almost as much as that in coal. We had a mountain of iron in Missouri that we thought inexhaustible, and in less than forty years the last ore was taken out. The forest waste the speaker considch worse than that of iron and coal. He said he would not attempt to speak of the loss from other than the utilitarian point of view. "We had when we started," said he. "the richest forests on earth. We did not have rosewood and ebony, but we had rich oaks, pines and hemlocks, and they extended over millions of square miles of primitive primeval forests. These have been all destroyed and denuded. According to Mr. Pinchot, at the present rate of consumption, a hundred million feet a year, our forests are not going to last more than a hundred to one hundred and fifty years. Then we will have to depend on Russia." The reckless waste of soil through grazing was commented on by the the following resolution was adopted: peaker, and also the waste of soil that is washed down through the Mississippi valley because of the denuding sons in interest to appear before the of the forests, which tend to preserve Common Council at the Council rooms, the soil. We should have industrial art proud of their work, realize they are not working for themselves, or their employer, but for the whole world." Prof. Monaghan spoke in the greatest admiration of the school that Andrew Carnegie has established at Washington. He said that Dr. Pritchard is at its head and that the best men of John Hopkins and other colleges are being induced to leave them to enter this institution to follow research work. The great laboratory near Berlin under governmental charge, where any problems of technical nature can be solved for the manufacturer absolutely without cost, was commented upon by the speaker. Professor Monaghan complimented Bridgeport upon having some of the most progressive manufactures of the

He Wires Gillett That Bill Passed Yesterday is Mest Offensive of All.

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 5 .- With the defeat in the lower House yesterday of two of the anti-Japanese measures. but the unexpected passage of a third bill segregating Japanese children in separate schools along with Chinese, Koreans and other Asiatics, President Roosevelt has again taken a hand in the anti-Japanese legislation, which for the last week has drawn international attention to California. Hardly had the bill been passed by the Assembly before Governor Gillette received the following telegram from the President: Your kind letter just received. What is the rumor that the California Legislature has passed a bill excluding the Japanese children from the public schools? This is the most offensive bill of all, and, in my judgment, is clearly unconstitutional and we should at once have to test it in the courts. Can it be stopped in the Legislature, or

The governor at once sent a reply, the nature of which he declines at present to make public. The bill passed, one of three anti-Japanese measures introduced by Assemblyman Grove L. Johnson, puts the Japanese in same category with other Asiatics and inserts the word "Japanese" in the present state statute providing for the segration in separate schools of "Mongolian" children.
